Location

Since 2016, the Estonian National Museum has been located in Raadi, Tartu, just 2 km from the city centre. The site was once the location of Raadi Manor, where the museum's collections were preserved in the 1920s.

Lake Raadi and the Raadi manor complex and park are close to the museum.

The museum

The main content of the museum is, of course, exhibitions and art gallery displays. In order to enrich the world of exhibitions, we also operate as a multifaceted cultural centre where you can organise conferences, training events, concerts, workshops, theatre performances and more.

Venue hire

We rent out rooms equipped with modern technology for organising conferences, meetings, lectures, cultural events, receptions and more.

Support

The museum's helpful staff will help you in every way they can to ensure that your event is a success. We offer organisational as well as technical support.

Catering

An old Estonian proverb states that while there is bread and mead to go around, there can be no hunger. Catering services are provided by the museum's restaurant (Pööripäev) and café (Pööriöö).

A modern building facade featuring a combination of glass and perforated metal panels. The glass reflects the sky and surrounding landscape. A large, cantilevered section of the building extends from the top left towards the right. The background shows a clear blue sky with scattered white clouds, a paved area, and a line of trees in the distance.
